FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF OCEAN BEACH, POINT LOMA, MISSION BAY AND MISSION BEACH

Twenty-third Year No. 22 | Phones: B-3157, B-3884, B-8090 | Friday, March 16, 1945 | Five Cents a Copy | Ocean Beach, California

C. Of C. Names Post War Plans Committee Of 5

First Activity Will Concern Mission Bay Project

At an enthusiastic meeting of the Ocean Beach Chamber of Commerce, held Tuesday evening at the Woman's clubhouse, the president, J. R. Lownes, was authorized to appoint a committee of five on post-war planning for Ocean Beach development, the first main objective concerning the proposed development of Mission Bay into a recreational area.

Most of the discussion centered around that project, and especially the proposed elimination of the present Mission Beach-Ocean Beach bridge, to which elimination several members raised the question of being detrimental to Ocean Beach through by-passing parts of this community. The majority sentiment expressed, however, seemed to be that since there likely is no chance to change the city's plan for the elimination of this bridge that the Chamber of Commerce should concentrate on various other projects that will develop the Ocean Beach community, and that likely the Mission Bay development when complete will on the whole really be of more benefit than detriment to Ocean Beach. As previously announced the Glenn Rick plan for Mission Bay calls for three bridges to connect Ocean Beach and Mission Beach, the first to be at the foot of Sunset Cliffs Blvd., over the San Diego river outlet channel.

President Lownes named Martin Murphy, Harry Masters, Earl Shaw, J. E. Loftus and Al Hunt.

In response to a request from the city administration the chairman of this committee was designated as the Ocean Beach representative on the city's advisory committee on Mission Bay development.

In regard to the community plaque honor roll for servicemen, a motion passed that Milton Lancaster be named co-chairman of the special committee along with Lloyd Greeson, Earl Shaw and John Loftus. President Lownes suggested that the committee get busy on the matter of ordering the plaque.

A motion passed that the secretary, Harry Master, go ahead with his plans for sending publicity about Ocean Beach to mail inquirers for information about this community.

Next meeting will be held on the third, instead of the second Tuesday of April, according to action taken Tuesday evening. Directors of the group will meet next Tuesday evening at the Lownes store.

Marjorie Young Of Dana Takes First In Tennis Tourney

Marjorie Young, 13-year-old Dana Junior high school tennis star, won first place in her class in the city-wide school tennis tournament held last week. She was the only entry from Dana.

As result of her victory in this preliminary she has qualified to play in the Harper Ink tournament to be staged next month and has been seeded No. 1 in her class of the entrants for that tourney.

In the city tournament semi-finals, which were played on the University Heights courts, Marjorie won a hard-fought match from Phyllis Gaines, the No. 1 seeded player by scores of 8-6 and 6-4 and outlasted Virginia Beardsley 6-3, 5-7 and 6-4 in the finals.

Jap Dictionary By Local Author In Great Demand

Fred Edwards, husband of the proprietor of the Joe Edwards flower shop on Newport Ave., reports that his vest pocket Jap-English Conversational and Dictionary is now in its fifth edition and has had a distribution of nearly 200,000 copies. The booklet contains 63 pages and "is dedicated to the boys in uniform, who may be called to the Pacific theatre of war," says the author in the foreword. "Should any be unfortunate enough to be captured and the book helps in obtaining some few comforts, that they might be otherwise deprived of, I shall indeed be repaid for the time spent in bringing this booklet to you."

"As a boy I lived in Japan and that part of the language I acquired was through daily contact with the boys and girls there of my own age. After returning to America I had no use for the language until the start of the removal of the Japs from the west coast."

Edwards reports that he became thoroughly familiar with Japan and the Japs, in the six years he was there. He ran away from home, he says, landed in Japan at the age of 13 and left there when he was 19.

The Arts and Crafts Press of San Diego are publishers of the booklet.

Roger Poole, commissioner of boys' federation, Point Loma high school and president of the group, announces the first major project of the semester. A service banner, six by four of white felt with a red trim has been placed in the main corridor of the school in memory to the Point Lomans in service. At a recent boys' federation meeting where ex-marine Capt. O. W. Todd gave a thrilling and inspirational talk the boys of Point Loma donated their dimes toward the purchase of this banner. Other outstanding projects are on Commissioner Poole's agenda for the semester. Ably assisting him are Wallace Rick, vice-president; Dave Finster, secretary and Gordon Thompson, treasurer. Robert D. Williams, vice-principal of the school, is sponsor of the boys' federation.

Kiwanians Hear Of Work Of Red Cross For Servicemen

More evidence of the great work that the Red Cross is doing for the servicemen was provided to Kiwanis club members at their Tuesday meeting by the two speakers of the evening, James Knowles of Ocean Beach, a leader in Red Cross activity down town, and Jack Porte, of Mission Beach, chairman of the American Legion County Welfare society. Knowles had arranged for two members of the Marine Corps from the local Marine base to assist in putting on a 10-minute program of moving pictures of what the Red Cross is doing in this war. The two Marines were Sgt. Ed Phillips of New York City and Pfc. Howard Gatlin of Del Rio, Texas. Program chairman for the evening was Earl Shaw.

Knowles declared that the biggest job the Red Cross is doing is for the men in the service, and for after the war the biggest Red Cross job is expected to be the rehabilitation of the civilians in the war devastated countries of the world.

Porte, who in civilian life a sculptor, thrilled his listeners with a graphic account of his seven years of duty with the famous French Foreign Legion, and at conclusion replied to many questions about the Legion. The Legion, he said, had done considerable development work as well as policing of the Arabs in the French colonies of North Africa. He closed with a plea for the Red Cross.

Wm. Don Thompson of Ocean Beach was a visitor at the meeting, a guest of Joe R. Lownes.

A Kiwanis education quiz is on the program for next week's meeting.

Excavation Under Way For Dana Jr. High Annex

The steam shovel roared and the jack hammer chattered this week at Dana Junior high school, telling of the start Monday of excavation for the foundation of the new $300,000 annex to the main building of the school. "No one minded the noise, however," Principal Clarence Swenson reported this week," since it meant that our new building was actually starting. It will be completed in 200 days—or shortly after the opening of the school for the first semester next September.

Contracting firm in charge is Scherer & Pritchard of Redlands, Calif., whose bid of $265,649 proved to be the lowest of the nine entered. At the recent meeting when award of the contract was made, the school board also voted $30,000 from its reserve for equipping a cafeteria, shops, home science rooms, little theatre, music room, mechanical drawing room and other rooms in the building.

The school's share of the unit's cost will be $80,000, plus the $30,000 for the equipment. The remainder of the funds will be provided by the federal works agency, since the students at the school are drawn largely from homes in federal housing projects.

Midway Merchants Form Association; Swetland At Head

The officers are included in the board of directors, first meeting of which was held Wednesday this week. Next regular meeting of the association will be held Wednesday, March 21, at 2 p. m. in the auditorium of the community building. Meetings are to be held once a month.

Main objective of the organization, Swetland stated this week, will be to boost for the development of the Mission Bay area. First activity decided on, however, will be to arrange for a Red Cross blood donor group from that section of the city.

Vote In Ocean Beach Precincts, Crary 461 Schroder 458

G. C. Crary, incumbent, and Carl Schroder of Ocean Beach were nominated for the city council in the first district as result of the city primary election held Tuesday. With only two of the 146 precincts in the district unreported at the time of going to press, Crary had a total of 3856 votes to 1345 for Schroder. The other two candidates ran far behind Schroder, Putnam polling only 448 votes and Johnson only 308. The result means that Crary and Schroder will contest in the April 17 election, in which the entire city will vote. At the primary only the voters of the first district cast ballots for the council candidates from said district.

Ocean Beach News tabulation of the vote in the 19 Ocean Beach precincts gave the following results, the vote in each case being complete for the precinct:

Crary 461 and Schroder 458, for councilman; for municipal judge, department 5, Brennan, incumbent, 659 and Howe, 305; for the school board, Lindley, incumbent, 517; Lewis 495 and McClendon 484.

Judge Brennan Wins

Unofficial totals for the entire city showed Brennan polled 17,603 and Howe only 8017, electing Brennan; and for school board, Lindley 13,861, Lewis 16,036 and McClendon 11,373. Lewis was elected, but the vote on the other two was so close that likely a run-off between the two will be needed at the April 17 election.

For the city council all three incumbents won the election in their respective districts, including Wincote in the second district, Hartley in the third and Boud in the fourth. The vote was the closest in the fourth district.

In the voting on the 11 amendments to the city charter all carried except the first, which had proposed to raise the city attorney's salary from $6500 to $9000.

GOD IS MY CO-PILOT

By COL. ROBERT L. SCOTT

WNU Features.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I: Scott's early experiences with gliders and airplanes. He goes to Ft. McPherson and enlists in the regular army as a private.

CHAPTER II: Scott wins the West Point competitive exam and gets a furlough before reporting. He is graduated as a second lieutenant of infantry and goes to Europe, which he tours on a motorcycle. He sells his motorcycle and arrives at Randolph Field, Texas.

CHAPTER III: Scott makes his first solo flight. Drives 1,300 miles to Georgia over every week-end to see his girl. Scott is now graduated from Kelly Field and has wings pinned on his chest. Ordered to report to Hawaii but wanting to get married he lays his plight before the General and is ordered to report at Mitchel Field, N. Y., instead.

CHAPTER IV: En route to New York Scott is stopped by police who mistake him for a bandit. He carries the mail for Uncle Sam in order to gain more flying time, and gets married.

CHAPTER V: The war edges closer and he is farther than ever from combat duty. He has been told he is too old for combat flying, and after December 7, 1941, he begins writing Generals all over the country for a chance to fly a fighter plane.

CHAPTER VI: Scott solos a Flying Fortress for the first time and makes twenty practice landings. He leaves for India from a Florida point.

CHAPTER VII: Easter Sunday in Africa. They fly along the Arabian coast and land at Karachi, India, covering 12,000 miles in eight days.

CHAPTER VIII: Col. Haynes orders the group to report at a base in Eastern Assam, on the India-Burma border.

Though I saw party after party, there was no way of identifying that of the General. I marked their positions on my map, and we went back later in a transport plane and dropped food to all of them—food, medicines, and blankets. Later I dropped letters attempting to establish a code between his party and our ships, so that if he wanted us to land when he reached the Chindwin, he could signal us with a panel. We were never able to contact him, but we continued to drop food to every party of refugees we saw.

Later on Joplin and I took food and carried two war correspondents on the Chindwin-Uyu circuit. Though we fired Very lights in compliance with the color schemes that we had dropped in the letters, again we got no answers by panel.

With the passing days we began to get reports from the British agents near Homalin that Jap planes were patroling the sector. From then on, Joplin or Colonel Haynes would fly the food transport and I'd escort them with my lone P-43. I've often laughed since then at my ego. For what in hell could I have done with one little fighter—sans self-sealing tanks, sans big guns, sans brains? I guess I actually thought then that if nine of eighteen little old Japs jumped on me that I'd shoot down that half of them at least, and the other half would run. Right soon I was to learn that I would have been shot down pretty fast. Such is the valor of ignorance.

As the days stretched into weeks and no news came of General Stilwell's party, we just dropped bags of rice and medicines to all parties, whether they were led by a General or by a British sergeant. On my single-ship escort trips I noted that burning barges were floating down the Chindwin, South of Tamu. One afternoon I saw four big riverboats burning at the docks of the town where the Manipur Road began. I reported this to the British.

Then, about three weeks from the day we had flown down to get the staff out of Shwebo, I met General Stilwell and his tired group at the little Tinsukia railroad station. I told him that practically all the Air Corps officers in Asia were waiting for him outside.

That night, as we gathered at tea planter Josh Reynolds' house, we had the greatest gathering of Generals' stars that all Assam had ever seen. There was Wavell, Alexander —who made on that occasion the classic statement: "The situation in Burma is very confused"—Brereton, Naiden, Bissell, Stilwell, Hearne and Siebert. Just about everyone except General Chennault, and he was very busy getting the AVG out of Loiwing and up to Paoshan. Burma had at last fallen.

The evacuation of these Chinese armies from Burma to India and China now gave us more adventures in the A. B. C. Ferrying Command. They were scattered all over northern Burma, from West of Myitkyina, North to Shimbyang and Putao. It was our job now to drop rice, salt, and medicines to these thousands of starving soldiers. I remember that as I first saw Burma it used to look to me like the greatest hunting country in all the world, completely wild and unspoiled. And it was just that —but there was nothing to hunt, for evidently there wasn't anything for even the animals to eat.

We'd fill a smaller burlap bag with rice or salt and sew that into another bag twice the size of the first. When these were dropped from an airplane, the inner bag broke but the rice was saved by the second bag. All we had to do was to fly through the monsoon rains of Burma, dodge the mountains, and find the places to drop the food to the waiting Chinese. Then, dodging the jungle trees, we'd go down as low as we dared and shove the bags out the door. We learned to hit the targets pretty accurately, and by the way the soldiers went after the sacks of food they were plenty hungry.

Once when it was clear enough to see the surrounding country, I was aware of a strange sight. We'd been dropping rice at Shimbyang when I saw some villages, and there again I noticed something that I realized now I'd been seeing through all the Burmese towns—white cattle, the bullocks of the East. It started me to thinking: How could people starve when there were hundreds and thousands of cattle in northern Burma?

That afternoon I got to talking over the food situation with one of the best of the ferry pilots, Capt. John Payne. He said he'd looked the field over at Putao—or Fort Hertz, as the British called it—and although it had been condemned by the British for the landing of aircraft, he could land a transport on the short runway. The entire length of that field was slightly less than one thousand feet, and if any other pilot than Joplin or Payne had made that statement I would have ignored the offer; but I knew that Payne knew what he was talking about.

We loaded on 4200 pounds of rice to land at Fort Hertz and went over the Naga Hills to Burma. As I sat there being Long John Payne's co-pilot, my thoughts were on this happy-go-lucky flyer. He had been an Eastern Airlines pilot for nine years before coming into the Air Corps. As he said, he'd let down into Atlanta so many times in the smoke and fog that the bad weather of Burma didn't worry him much. When Johnny first joined the ferry command he came into prominence by originating a saying that to us exemplified our feelings about the whole affair in Burma. Johnny had said, "If at first you don't succeed, give up, for no one in this country gives a damn anyway."

We got over Fort Hertz pretty quickly and circled the little cleared place on top of a hill. The single runway, if you could call it that, was just nine hundred feet long. There were tracks where ships had landed, but we found later that they had been slow RAF biplanes. There was a makeshift bridge at one end —two trees across a stream—and four markers made from dead trees which showed the other end of the "runway." Everything else was jungle. As Payne throttled the engines for the landing, he let down the wheels and said in his nonchalant way:

"When I say okay, give me full flaps—then if I don't hit the first ten feet of that field, spill 'em, for we'll go around again."

Well, Johnny Payne brought that heavy ship in like a master. He didn't hit the first ten feet—I honestly think he put those wheels down on the first foot of the available runway, and we had stopped at least fifty feet before we got to the other end. You ask a transport pilot if eight hundred feet isn't a damn good landing.

Johnny stayed back to unload the ship and guard it, for the Japs were supposed to be fairly close and we had learned that when people are in the panic of evacuation and starvation you can trust no one. I walked down the trail to contact the General of the Fifth Chinese Army. I wanted to ask him if he was getting the rice, and find out why he needed rice when there were bullocks all around; I guess I really wanted to see for myself if the stories of sickness and starvation were true. What I saw and found was proof enough.

General Ho took me about three miles down the road that led to Suprabum, and I counted fifty-five bodies of soldiers who had died either of cholera or from starvation. As I walked among them, with the harsh smell of death in the air, this Chinese General told me that his soldiers had been killed trying to get bullocks from the Burmese. You see, the Burmese are Buddhists, and it is against their religion to eat meat or to see the sacred bullocks slaughtered. We must keep on dropping rice or the entire army would starve, said the General. And we kept it up, dropping over two million pounds into Burma before the armies were evacuated into India for re-equipment.

CHAPTER X

Back at the field I found that Payne had loaded the transport with forty sick or wounded Ghurkas. In fact, we had to keep more from getting aboard by threatening them with our guns, for after all, we had the same small field for taking off we'd had for landing. Johnny swung the ship into the wind and we were off in some six hundred feet. We went in many times again, after the Ghurkas had lengthened the runway slightly, and we finally moved out most of the soldiers before the monsoon rains ran us out. But I'll never forget Captain Payne's feat in that first landing of a transport at Fort Hertz.

Following the defeat of the Allied armies down in southern and central Burma, the refugees poured to the North and to the Northwest. Those to the Northwest tried to walk out by the Lido Road, which was nothing more than a game trail. Many of them died, and of those who came out many died after entering India. I heard stories of bodies by the hundreds, almost buried in the mud, all along the trail from Burma to India. Those who kept coming North from Shwebo up the railroad to Myitkyina finally wound up on Myitkyina's small field, anxiously waiting for aerial transportation over the remaining one hundred and ninety miles to Dinjan.

Some of the loads that ferry pilots packed into those DC-3's would have curdled the blood of the aeronautical engineers who designed the ship. The C-47, or DC-3, as the airlines called the Douglas transport, was constructed to carry a full load of twenty-four passengers or six thousand pounds. The maximum altitude was expected to be about 12,000 feet—but we later went a minimum of 18,000 across the hump, and sometimes we had to go to 21,500 to miss the storms and ice. Carrying the refugees, we broke all the rules and regulations because we had to. There were women and children, pregnant women, and women so old that they presumably couldn't have gone to the altitude that was necessary to cross into India. There were hundreds of wounded British soldiers with the most terrible gangrenous infections. At the beginning we used to load the wounded first, those who were worst off; but later, when we realized that with our few transports we'd never get them all out, we took only the able-bodied. That was a hard decision to make, but we looked at it finally from the theory that those must be saved who could some day fight again.

Accidents From Explosives Brings Action By C. D. C.

A plan for reporting, collecting and disposing of war souvenirs and types of high explosive shells was received this week by Harry Masters, deputy area commander for Ocean Beach, of the Citizens' Defense Corps. Because of the two recent accidents that already have occurred, one in Balboa Park and the other in the Torrey Pines section, where several boys were seriously hurt, the Corps is taking steps to prevent further injuries or possible deaths, working in cooperation with the naval and military authorities and the police department.

In a bulletin of information of the subject, received by Masters, attention is called to a "serious public safety problem that has been created in this area as a result of the war, by the fact that many people have in their possession souvenirs of various types of military ordnance, both foreign and our own. Many of these objects have been found to be in a very dangerous condition.

"The Bomb Disposal officer of of the 11th Naval district believes that if people know that they can have their souvenirs examined without fear of having them confiscated that many more people will make reports of objects that might otherwise never be reported."

According to the bulletin most direct action can be obtained by contacting the police, by phoning Franklin 1101, Ext. 21, or contacting the Ocean Beach police station. Further information can be obtained from Masters at the Safeway store here.

Camp & Hospital Ocean Beach

By ONA E. PITCOCK

This week many are busy on the Red Cross drive. Never was your donation so badly needed. One woman who gave a check for $100 said her husband was a prisoner in a German war camp who would have starved had he not received his Red Cross food package each week. No matter where your man is fighting there also are Red Cross workers, with all the comforts that can be used under such circumstances. Not only do women serve coffee, sandwiches, doughnuts, etc., but field directors give out warm water and shave materials, also gum chocolate and articles too numerous to mention. Please make your donations as generous as possible.

Last week we had 61½ dozen cookies, four birthday cakes and 3½ dozen cup cakes. At the hospital they had two birthday parties and report a wonderful time. It takes so little to make life a little brighter for them and they have given so much.

Since Christmas the Center has received two packages of Christmas cards, wrappings, etc., from Mrs. Mae Heidbrink and this week we received a generous check for Red Cross drive from her. Best of all, she expects to be home very soon.

Don't forget cookie day is Wednesday. Bring in your musical instruments, card tables, lamps, etc. also 6x6 inch bags.

Go both to surgical dressing room at the Marine Base and to your blood donor center. Do all you can to get this war over.

Those around W. Point Loma Blvd., can call Mrs. Brewer B-6083.

Our boys must keep on fighting—we must keep on buying WAR BONDS until victory is won. Keep on BACKING THE ATTACK.

House Designing, Topic For Home Planners Agenda

C. J. Padrewski, San Diego Architect, To Speak

"Designing the House" will be the topic of the third in the series of 10 meetings of the Home Planners' Institute to be given here Monday evening, March 19, 7:30 p. m., in the Ocean Beach Elementary school, announces Frank Lockett, Institute manager. Principal speaker will be C. J. Padrewski, San Diego architect, and member of the Architects association. Padrewski will discuss the highspots and pitfalls in planning a home, layout of floor plans, budget, relation of house and site to other houses in the area, and building costs.

Second speaker will be Ted Stark, of the Stark Investment and Insurance Co., who will speak on protecting the home investment through mechanic's liens, liability insurance, contractor's bonds, and other forms of builder's insurance. E. G. Merrill Jr., title executive who appeared on the first program, Monday, March 5, will speak on title insurance and escrow, types of deeds, and the various forms of title protection.

Presented under the direction of the adult education program, the home planning classes are specially designed for those who plan to build, buy, or remodel a home after the war. Made possible through the financial sponsorship of leading San Diego firms and civic organizations, the Home Planners' Institute's series of free programs are aimed at creating an interest in new and better homes after the war. It is hoped that through this way a backlog of new homes to be built will be created and thus provide employment for many thousands of workers after the war.

Open free to all residents of Ocean Beach and Mission Beach, the classes are conducted under the auspices of the adult education program, and will bring 20 experts in the field of home building to the series of 10 meetings. Classes begin at 7:30 p.m., every Monday evening at the Ocean Beach school. For the benefit of those unable to attend, an identical program is being presented each Tuesday evening at the La Jolla high school.

Further information concerning the activities of the Home Planner's Institute can be had by calling in person at the Institute headquarters, main floor Electric Building, San Diego or by telephoning Main 9867.

LOWER Natural GAS RATES NOW in effect

A 3 per cent Reduction in Natural Gas Bills applicable to all except minimum bills and surplus industrial gas users which became effective for one year beginning February 1, 1945, will save natural gas users approximately $161,000.00 during the next twelve months.

The new rate schedules, on file with and approved by the California Railroad Commission, reflect the total savings made through a reduction in the cost of Natural Gas purchased by the San Diego Gas & Electric Company from the Southern Counties Gas Company of Los Angeles. An additional voluntary reduction has been made by the San Diego Company in equal amount and in keeping with present revenues.

CONSERVE GAS WHENEVER POSSIBLE

Lower gas rates should not be conducive to wasteful use.

An urgent plea for fuel saving throughout the nation has been made by War Mobilization Director Byrnes and to implement this request the War Production Board has requested gas utility companies to urge their customers to keep room temperatures at 68 degrees and utilize all possible means to conserve fuel.

Your full support of our Government's wartime fuel conservation program will hasten the end of the war.

ST. PATRICK—

St. Patrick, who never refused battle with the oppressors of men, dedicated his life 1500 years ago to the Christian betterment of the world.

It is unfortunate for world betterment and for future understanding among men and nations that Ireland finds herself excluded from the World Security conference in California next month. No missionary, saint or prophet in all history would regret that circumstance more than the good St. Patrick himself. Unwilling to declare war on the agressor nations and to cast her lot with the Allies, Ireland will find no seat at the important meeting—a meeting to which every Nation of good will should have something to contribute.

On this 17th of March, when Irishmen and their friends everywhere honor the memory of St. Patrick, real regret will be felt that modern Irish leaders will have no place among the world's Conference representatives, who will be striving, too, toward a better world.

THE YALTA "COMPROMISE"—

Most everyone has heard the well worn joke about the man and his wife who argued whether to go to the theatre, as she wanted to do, or stay home, which was his desire. They compromised by going to the theatre.

This is the same sort of "compromise" which came out of the Yalta conference in connection with the voting procedure in the proposed World Security organization. In other words, Stalin got just what he wanted.

At Dumbarton Oaks the big stumbling block was the insistence by the Russians that any member of the big powers (Russia, Britain, U. S., China, France) should have the right to veto any military action against itself or any other nation. The British and Americans opposed this idea since it would nullify the threat and use of force against aggressors.

So, at Yalta the Big Three "compromised." Now the teeth in the Security organization will be false teeth—they can be taken out whenever there is danger of an aggressor being bitten.

If the compromise voting procedure had been in effect when Italy attacked Etriopia—Italy was a big power and would have been able to veto military action against herself—history would have been the same.

Those who defend the Yalta compromise say that the Security organization can at least subject aggressors to world censure. That would be funny if it hadn't proved so tragic in the past. Japan was censured by all decent peoples. Italy was censured. Germany was censured. Did that prove effective? Did that save unarmed civilians—women and children—from the bullets, bombs, bayonets of the aggressors?

This weakness in the proposed World Security organization should not cause us to give up in despair. America and Britain should continue their efforts to have this weakness corrected so that the teeth, or military force, will have a real bite when the need arises.

SERVICE MEN HELP RYAN

"Our buddies overseas need those manifolds badly, so we want to help build them in our spare time." That was the remark of one of the hundreds of coast guardsmen, sailors and marines who spend their free hours working at the Ryan Aeronautical Company. Many of them, like the group shown here with Foreman Mickey Meyers, work nightly in the Manifold division building Ryan manifolds used on the B-29 Superfortress and other famous fighting planes for the Navy. If these service men can devote their spare hours as well as their working hours to win-the-war work, why don't YOU help too? Ryan needs hundreds of skilled and unskilled workers. The company's downtown employment office, 1023 Fourth Avenue, is always glad to talk to visitors about good jobs now open at Ryan.

"There's a telephone in the house where I am moving Can you connect it for me?"

In normal times the answer would be: "Certainly! When would you like to have it done?"

We wish that we could give that answer today.

But there is a serious shortage of telephone facilities. Telephone factories and manpower have been producing almost entirely for war. Others, like you, are waiting for telephone service. That telephone in the house you are moving to may be already "spoken for"—by somebody who has been waiting longer.

We are sorry that the shortage in telephones, central office equipment, outside wires and other facilities causes inconvenience to anyone. We will do our best to take care of as many orders as possible.

Thanks for understanding.

will find you a fine young couple like the Kirsches, who are desperate for suitable living quarters.

Can you help Mrs. Irene Kirsch?

We simply can't afford to lose Mrs. Kirsch who is a riveter at CONVAIR. Her husband is stationed here in the Navy. They are existing in a space approximately 9' x 9', not even completely shut off from the rest of the little three-room house they share with a family of four! Even a room of their own, with kitchen privileges, would help. Perhaps you have this or something better to offer. Phone us at once, please!

Our Selected Tenant Plan is finding homes for some mighty loyal people who have been sticking to war jobs in the face of adversity. Your idle room, servant's quarters, garage apartment—most anything will help these deserving people and help you, too. Talk it over. The need is urgent. Decide "Yes" tonight.

YOU HEAR IT EVERYWHERE:

Yes, home owners throughout California these days tell their friends, "We refinanced our home loan at Bank of America. Now, instead of an old first and second mortgage, we have a single FHA insured loan which we meet with smaller monthly payments."

That's the whole story of home loan refinancing in a few words, and if that story interests you, the manager or lending officer of your nearest branch of Bank of America will gladly answer any questions.

Club Nominates Officers, Naming Mrs. Early Again

Ocean Beach Woman's club plans to elect officers at the regular April meeting, to be held on the second Thursday in April. At their March meeting, held Thursday last week, the members nominated officers for the ensuing year, again nominating Mrs. C. W. Early for president in recognition of her work with the club during the current year. Others nominated were as follows:

Mrs. Lloyd Davis, first vice pres.: Mrs. Q. G. Turner, second vice president: Mrs. D. R. Wallace, corresponding secertary; Mrs. G. E. Paulin, recording secretary; Mrs. L. C. Near, treasurer: Mrs. J. Mrs. A. E. Kineman, music chairman, presented a pleasing musical program by members of the Point Loma high school music department, consisting of a vocal solo by Miss Lee Carovln Henderson, accompanied by Miss Nancy Berry; and selections by a string quartet composed of Pearl Alice Hall, first violin, Phyllis Van Gessel, second violin, Thelma Aquilar, viola and Mildred Van Gessel, cello.

Main speaker for the meeting was J. Marshall Hall of the San Diego Toastmasters club, who spoke on the Red Cross, emphasizing its value as a "definite part of the war effort—an investment in future world unity, the future of our nation, and the future well-being of the servicemen and women overseas who are making tremendous sacrifices for the good of the world."

Mrs. Morris Fried, the club's Red Cross chairman, asked for more help at the Tuesday work sessions being carried on at the clubhouse for the Red Cross.

RECOLLECTIONS OF NOTED POET GIVEN TO LITERATURE UNIT

Mrs. Marian Krettler of Ocean Beach gave an interesting program on her recollections of the noted poet, Vachel Lindsey, at the meeting Monday evening of the literature group of the Ocean Beach Woman's club. Mrs. Krettler reported that she had lived in the same apartment house in Spokane, Wash., where the poet and his family were residents and that their two families had become close friends.

Quoting from an article she had written and sold to the American Mercury magazine, Mrs. Krettler gave interesting sidelights about the poet. She read several of his poems and displayed pictures of the poet and his family.

Also on the program was Mrs. Virginia Bartlett, who displayed to the group a copy of a newspaper published in English in the Philippines last July in which Japanese propaganda predominated, evidently published to influence the Fillipinos. The paper had been sent Mrs. Bartlett by her son who is now on duty with the Coast Guard in the Philippines.

Following the program refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. D. R. Wallace and Mrs. G. E. Paulin at tables attractively decorated in the St. Patrick's day motif with green and white flowers and white tapers in crystal holders. Mrs. Alfred Bedworth and Mrs. Smith poured.
